The Internet Dating Site Logbook

The only way to keep track of all your Internet dating site details, emails and meetings!

The Internet Dating Site Logbook

WELCOME to the Internet Dating Site Logbook.

This logbook has been designed to help you keep track of the details of all the people you meet through dating sites on the Internet. Even a person with the best memory will struggle to remember the names, contact information and meeting details of the half a dozen dates they've had that week! This logbook will help you keep your sanity and it is an essential tool of the successful Internet dater.

The logbook is in a simple format - there is a dedicated page for each dating site you visit. For each site:

1. Take a new "first" page of the logbook
2. Fill in the URL of the site at the top of the page
3. Note down the handle you are using on this site, your login name and password for the site, the date you joined and your direct profile URL (if available). The direct profile URL is good to note down for sites which allow you to write a lot in your profile. You can then direct people from other dating sites (which may not allow you to write so much) to your profile on the site with your bigger and better profile.

As soon as you email someone through the site, you then begin to fill in the "Profiles of Interest" section of the logbook. There is a separate table dedicated to each profile/person you email (there are 2 of these per page of the logbook). Information in each of the tables needs to be filled in when:

1. You first email the person
2. When you receive an email in reply
3. When you obtain contact details such as phone numbers and addresses and;
4. When you have that all-important meeting/date.

When you've emailed more than two profiles (which will happen very quickly!) use the "follower" logbook page for all subsequent emails you send through that site. Don't forget to print out a copy of the person's profile and attach it to this sheet. Their profile may not be there next week!

Use this logbook well and Good Luck!
